

Dear Friends,

On January 30, 2006, ExxonMobil announced yet another record breaking profit--$32 billion in 2005. Despite its enormous profits, Exxon Mobil still refuses to invest in developing cleaner, safer energy solutions or to pay the money it still owed to fishermen who lost their businesses by the 1989 Exxon Valdez oil spill.

March Alert

Send to:

Rex Tillerson, CEO
Corporate Headquarters
5959 Las Colinas Boulevard
Irving, TX 75039-2298

Dear Mr. Tillerson,

I am disturbed by ExxonMobil's active support of drilling the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge and ExxonMobil's efforts to block meaningful action to cut global warming pollution and its funding of "junk science" to hid the real facts about global warming. I urge you to stop your company's drilling in the Arctic and make clear steps to cut global warming pollution.

Sincerely,

Additional Background for letters:

There is a failed strategy for energy resulting in an over-dependence on oil causing rising gasoline prices.

Exxon Mobil continues to be an active supporter of drilling in the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge

ExxonMobil blocks meaningful action to cut global warming pollution and hide the facts about global warming.

ExxonMobil has made conscious decisions to forgo investment in clean energy solutions despite record profits at a time of rising gas prices.
